WHEELING, JUNE 26, 1891.

After the Big Show is Over. The Parkersburg State Journal notes

the Intelligencer's suggestion to set up on our Fair Grounds the West Virginia building after it shall have served its purpose at Chicago. This is regarded as picturesque and mountainesque assurance, and the Journal would like to know why the building should not be set up in Parkersburg, which "has been selected as headquarters for the World's Fair business in this State."

Well, among other reasons, because Parkersburg has not asked for it; because the State Fair is located in Wheeling and can provide the best place in the State for it; because more people would see the building and its contents in Wheeling than if it were located anywhere else in the State. It has not been suggested that the building be brought here at the expense of the State, nor that the State shall maintain it. The INTELLIGENCER was and is of opion that it would be of some account to the State to have the usefulness of the building prolonged, and at the moment it did not occur to us that there was impropriety or discourtesy in proposing that the chief city of the State should undertake the charge of it for the general welfare.

We were not aware that Parkersburg would make special claim to any part of West Virginia's exhibit because she has been worthily honored by being made the present headquarters. Moreover it is possible that the Journal has not given the proposition a sober second thought.

Fortunately the question does not press for settlement at this moment. The first and most important thing is to make our exhibit so great a success that every West Virginian shall be proud of it and the State greatly benefited thereby. In this laudable effort the INTELLIGENCER will be glad to see Parkersburg distance Wheeling if she Gunning for the Wires.

Pittsburgh's committee on public safety serves notice that the overhead wires must come down. Those of the down-town portion of the city must be underground a year hence. The electrical companies say the scheme is impractical. The superintendent of the city's electrical department says he has made a thorough investigation in the light of the latest scientific improvements, and knows the proposition to be entirely feasible.

The Pittsburgh authorities insist on their plan because overhead wire are unsightly and dangerous. The danger has been appreciated keenly during recent fires, when it was almost impossible for the firemen to make their way thorough the maze of wires. Overhead wires will go, but their going may be a little delayed.

Contract Labor.

The immigration authorities are after an Illinois creamery proprietor for bringing over a Scotchman under contract. The New York Morning Advertises discovers that Whitelaw Reid, minister to France, is liable under the contract labor law for importing two Austrian stone-cutters to work on his country home.

If Mr. Reid be guilty his case will be an interesting one. It has been held that a preacher cannot be brought into the country under contract, and the question has been raised under the same law whether Slavin the pounder, is an artist or a laborer.

The Strike Universal.

In Paris the carpenters, bakers, butchers and grocers are amusing themselves with a strike of a very pronounced and demonstrative character. By line upon line and precept upon precept we learn that the strike is known in other countries than our own. This is what bothers the free traders, particularly when the illustration turns up in free trade Great Britain. The fact of the matter is that the tariff has nothing to do with these things one way or another.

Undermining the Alliance Platform

An officer on a trans-Atlantic stemmer makes the interesting statement that fires on ocean-going steamers are common, and that the newspapers do not get hold of more than one of them in fifty. THE Republican outlook in Iowa is not the best. Democrats are united, Republicans divided. The Democrats are in for the repeal of the prohibitory liquor law and are likely to draw to their support a large number of Republicans who desire the repeal of that law. KEYSTONE BANK STOCK.

Washington, June 25.—Postmaster General Wanamaker, when asked if there was any truth in the testimony yesterday before the councils committee of Philadelphia, made the following statement:

"I do not exactly know what took place at the committee meeting, but I hope they will probe to the uttermost everything about the reported overissue of the Keystone bank stock. I never owned a share of Keystone stock by purchase or gift, nor did I ever find a share of it, and the books of the bank will prove that I was never recorded as a stockholder if they are properly kept. It is possible, however, that if the bank could over issue stock it could do queer things in book keeping; I am not responsible for that. Some of the certificates I first held might have been in my name, and then transferred to the names in the certificates I surrendered.

The same stock is frequently so transferred. ferred. "On one occasion I obtained a loan for Mr. Lucas on his stock from a trust company of which I was director, which loan was paid oil by the Lucas estate after his death, as its attorney will attest after his death, as its attorney will attest if called. These certificates were in my name, but I did not own them nor have a cent of interest in the loan, which was purely an act of friendship. In my testimony before the committee I confined myself to the stock held by me in the Reading operation, which was the only stock I had interest in, and then only as collateral, and, the fact remains exactly as I stated it. I never owned a share of the stock at any time, and the stock ledger at the bank ought to prove it."

vestigating committee of Councils, which has been engaged for the past week in examining the books of the Keystone Bank, met again this afternoon. Robert M. Yardley, Preceiver of the Keystone bank, was the first witness. Mr. Yardley, dentified the 2,518. shares of alleged over-issued stock dating from July 23, 1888 to December 1, 1890. The stock was signed by John Lucas, as president, Gideon W. Marsh, as cashier. Granville P. Maines, as president, and John Hayes as cashier. The stock originally stood in the name of John C. Lucas, but had been transferred by him to a number of persons. It subsequently transpired, in the testimony of another witness, that the persons to whom the stock was transferred were merely "straw men," and that their names had been used when the stock was pledged to borrow money on. Bank, met again this afternoon. Robert Secretary Foster, accompanies of Editor Joseph O. Smith, of the Urbana Citizen, arrived from Fostoria, and, in company with the other gentlemen, met at Senator Shermanls residence, ex-Chairman Cappeller, of the Executive Committee, sharing iin the counsel of the party. The chief subject of discussion was the organization of Republican clubs in every voting precinct of the State, a measure favored by Major McKinley as well as the others, the only difference in opinion being as to the financial methods to be employed. The representatives of the Republican League thought about $20,000 should be devoted to the establishment of the clubs. The other members of the Conference inclined to the opinion that the clubs should be so organized as to be
